The 1983 Representation of the People Act as amended places a duty on the Council to divide its area into polling districts for parliamentary and other elections. These districts must also be kept under review so as to ensure that electors are given reasonable facilities for voting.

This report proposes alterations to polling district boundaries bringing them into line with the new parliamentary constituency boundaries that come into effect at the next General Election. Some further alterations to boundaries are also proposed to rationalise the existing layout and also to the names of polling districts to recognise the new constituencies.

The polling district maps are attached separately.
