Betting shops and casinos are the scourge of the high street. The lower the tone of the surrounding area. depress house prices, and attract low level criminality and disorder. They are well known for facilitatng money laundering. Furthermore, these establishments prey on the poor and the vulnerable. No one ever walked down Fulham or hampstead high road and said " the neighbourhood could really do with a casino or betting shop", and the same goes for Willesden. I emphatically object to another one of these horrible establishments
